The missing Passport - Writing Unit 77

Joe put his hand into his pocket and realised his passport was gone. He froze in the middle of the crowded airport terminal. Never before had he felt so terrified, this was his first solo trip to Japan, and his flight was boarding in only thirty minutes.

He was panic-stricken as he searched his back for the fifth time, he looked at his empty hands in disbelief, he remembered having it at the coffee shop, so he ran back there as fast as he could, his heart was beating furiously against his chest. When she arrived, he asked the barista if anyone had found a blue passport. The barista shook his head slowly. At that moment, Joe's heart sunk, he thought his dream vacation was over before it even started.

Suddenly a young woman tapped him on the shoulder. She was holding a blue booklet. "Excuse me, did you drop this by the magazines?" she asked with a smile.

Joe couldn't believe his luck. It was his passport! It left him feeling incredibly relieved, he thanked her a thousand times, as he ran toward his gate just in time, he was over the moon! He finally boarded the plane and sat in his seat. I felt on top of the world, he thought, as the plane took off toward his big adventure.
